Central and Eastern European (CEE) countries underwent radical and sustained economic and regulatory reforms in the last decades. Despite many similarities, CEE countries cannot be seen as a homogenous group. These countries have experienced different degrees of economic development, regulatory and governance reforms, and exhibit peculiarities stemming from their history and culture. We believe that this setting offers a great opportunity to investigate how incentives change and impact corporate reporting practices. Moreover, we are interested in understanding how these changes affect the profession and have implications for regulatory work.

We invite papers that investigate the impact of changes in regulation, corporate governance mechanisms, enforcement difficulties and institutional reforms on the reporting practices of companies in CEE countries. We particularly encourage comparative studies highlighting causes and consequences of similarities and differences across countries. All methodological designs are welcome. Authors should bear in mind the publication policy of Accounting in Europe, which focuses on papers that are relevant to practice and policy. Papers must be submitted in English, although editorial assistance with the English language will be available for the papers selected.

Authors should submit their papers, including abstracts, by 1 March 2016 to Accounting in Europe (https://mc.manuscriptcentral.com/raie). Feedback for the papers considered for the special issue will be provided in a panel section organised in conjunction with the Accounting and Management Information Systems (AMIS) conference organised in Bucharest during 8-9 June 2016. Upon incorporation of the feedback received at the conference, the papers will be published in a special issue of Accounting in Europe.
