

Belt and Road Talent: meeting the skills needs

Thursday 8th November, 10am

University of Sydney Business School, Darlington NSW 2006, Australia

Price: free

Please join us at this symposium looking at the Belt and Road Initiative

At this event we'll seek to gain insights into the core skills needed to support the Belt and Road Initiative, including cultural understanding and awareness, people to people exchange, and how understanding these skills can create opportunities. The panel will include ACCA members and employers offering their views on the importance of skills associated with professional services and how skills transfer might be facilitated.

This is an opportunity for all academics and employers, as well as members of ACCA and other professional bodies (including students, affiliates and members) to provide input to this interesting discussion topic which will also feed into the thought leadership work being undertaken by ACCA.

To join us, please register in advance by visiting our website; please note that spaces are limited.

This symposium takes place immediately before the opening of the World Congress of Accounting Educators and Researchers. ACCA are able to offer a discounted rate for symposium attendees to register for the first day of the World Congress, please register for the symposium for more details.
